Dr. Drew Reynolds

Drew is the Program Director of Childspring International in Atlanta, and CEO of Common Good Data Consulting. With a PhD and Masters in Social Work and a Masters in Education, he is passionate about advancing the lives of children and families on the margins. In his consulting work, he advises nonprofit organizations to use data-driven decision-making to secure funding and improve community wellbeing. His work inspires change in the lives of the people and communities they serve.

Drew has 10 years of experience working with children and youth as a consultant, researcher, high school teacher, instructional designer, mentor, and coach. He was an Assistant Professor of Social Work at UNCC until December 2018. During his time in Charlotte, he worked with Shantiqua Neely when she was at A Child's Place and with other organizations to help leverage their work in our community.

Drew and his wife now live in Atlanta and have 3 children, ages 1 to 5. You can listen to his podcast, Common Good Hour here.
